CHRISTMAS 1945

Americans should have the happiest Christmas season in a decade. Every person we meet is filled with the Christmas spirit. Everywhere we look, during the war years there was no Christmas as happy as this year.

The holidays have come, and with a wonderful feeling that the long battle is over. Peace on earth, good will toward men is what we think of as Christmas. Everywhere there is a feeling of thankfulness that the fighting is over and that the boys will soon be home.

We extend greetings to our readers and pray that their Christmas may be full of all the fine things that traditionally go with the Christmas of holidays.

PEACE POWER

The nation's first mission for 1946 will include the building of peace power.

There is talk of a Santa that does not bring something that we have been deprived of in recent years.

All this gives the proper light to those who appreciate what they've got the thanks of a thankful people whose every need fulfillment proves that we have chosen for us wise material people.

CALL IT OFF

The British Post Office has announced that the ban on the use of Christmas seals on letters and packages of the commonwealth is to be lifted. The decision was announced by Sir Ernest Bevin, Labor member of the British Cabinet. Sir Ernest said that President Roosevelt's Christmas seal on the war and added to by changing it to one of peace on which the proceeds were for wartime relief. Thousands of pieces of mail already piled up with the seals and it will be a year before the backlog of second-class mail is cleared. The decision for the cancellation was announced by Postmaster General James A. Farley. That we are ready for war and that we want peace.

WISHES TOO

This may be the last Christmas season with workers busy overtime making it more enjoyable. The nation is ready to meet toys manufactured by former military and munitions plants.

A Victory Bond makes a fine Christmas gift.
